engineered stone

Cultured marble is a man-made blend of stone particles and resins that is combined with pigments to produce a wide range of colors and natural looking patterns – cultured marble, cultured granite among them, its made in molds to create beautiful and unique pieces for your home. Nonporous elements and small scratches can generally be repaired by applying a gel compound that fixes the surface. Cultured Marble comes in many colors, but its most common tone it is white. FEATURES

Simbology

Side splash available

A backsplash is usually installed along the back edge of a vanity to enhance its appearance and prevent water from dripping behind it.

Includes Overflow

The overflow is a hidden channel running along the underside of the sink basin. It's typically unseen from both below and above.

Non-drip Edge

The non-drip edge prevents water from leaking at the borders of the top.

Pre-drilled hole

Pre-drilling refers to the drilling of a hole in the workpiece that has a smaller diameter than the piece to be inserted. Pre-drilling creates space for the piece in the material and thus prevents the workpiece from splitting.
